A NARROW ESCAPE.

Dr. J. McClusky Blayney and Two Negroes Near Being Drowned.

Wednesday morning Rev. Dr. J. McClusky Blayney started to cross the river in a skiff with a negro oarsman, and negro passenger by the name of Henry Waters, the latter sitting in the bow. About the middle of the stream, where the current was very swift, the boat collided with the steam ferryboat W. L. Norton, when the smaller boat came near being drawn under the steamer and the occupants drowned, but the presence of mind of Dr. Blayney and the man at the oars saved them. Waters, the colored passenger, thinking they were going to be run down, made a spring for the deck of the steamboat but only succeeded in catching hold of the guards and went into the water waist deep. He clung on, however, until a rope could be gotten under him by the men on the boat and was hauled on board.

The Ferry Failed.

The rains of the last week caused a rise in the river of several feet and the current became so swift below the bridge that the ferry had to be abandoned. Up to Sunday afternoon the boat was operated with the "lazy line," but in the afternoon an effort was made to use the trolley line, when it was found that there were so many reactionary currents that it was useless and the boat was laid up. People wishing to cross the river then had to resort to rowboats, but Monday afternoon Mr. Noel Gaines, the coal dealer, with commendable enterprise, chartered the steamer W. L. Norton and began running her as a steam ferry. The Elevator Coal Co. countered this move by hiring Luckett's omnibus to run every half hour between the corner of Wapping and St. Clair streets, on the North Side—by way of the railroad bridge and the boulevard—to the corner of Second and Bridge streets, on the South Side. The fare on both the ferry and the bus being five cents each way. These modes of travel were both great conveniences to the South Side people, of course, but it appears to us that some effort should have been made by the authorities to supply free transportation to those people who were cut off from their business by the high water. It did not seem to strike the committee that way, however, most of them residing on the north side and were not inconvenienced at all. Like the Lexington man who said he "didn't care a d—n what happened so it did not happen to him," they seemed indifferent, leaving the people to get across the river the best way they could. They seemed to lose sight of the fact that the St. Clair street bridge is free—the people of the south side of the city and county being taxed equally with those of the north side to make it so—and when deprived of the use of the bridge they helped to pay for they had a right to expect that they be given some other means of getting into the heart of the city without additional tax being levied upon them. Why was not the steamboat or the bus chartered by the city and county and made free, instead of being run by private individuals for gain?

Could Lie Some Himself.

A flashily dressed individual was going down on the train to Louisville a few days ago, and was sitting in the next seat to a young farmer from this county, who was on his way to the city to dispose of his crop of tobacco. The two fell into conversation when the well-dressed man soon let the farmer know that he knew all about raising tobacco, but it was a slow business, and that he had made an independent fortune dead easy dealing in cattle. The farmer boy said yes, he had found raising tobacco pretty hard, until after dreaming three nights in succession that a lot of money was buried near a certain stone on his father's farm he went to the stone and dug down three feet and a half and found a sheetiron box containing fifteen thousand dollars in gold. Since that time he had been all right, only raising tobacco as a pastime, and was just going down now to sell a hoghead or two to raise a little pocket change.

J. W. Fairbanks,

Postmaster at Mankato, Neb., writes us as follows: I have taken but one package of your Dr. Hale's Household Tea and it is the first medicine I have found that has done me any good. For 30 years I have been troubled with liver and kidney troubles, growing worse all the time. For the last 10 years I have not been able to do much or any work. I feel dull, sleepy and as though I could not stir. My bowels would not move often than once a week. After taking one package I am much better and now can take hold and work. Have a good appetite and bowels regular. For dyspepsia, constipation, all liver and kidney troubles, etc., it has no equal. Only 50c. and 50c. a package at P. H. CARPENTER'S drug store. a

C. D. BERCAW,
G. P. A.

He Knew His Business.

We may at times have doubted the ability of Prof. G. Hog to make a correct forecast of the weather for the last six weeks of winter, but we want to say right here that when he came forth on Friday of last week, observed his shadow and suddenly retired to his private apartments, he displayed a wonderful amount of caution and an ability to look into the future which is not excelled by his illustrious peers, Hicks, Foster, G. Bone and Probabilities.

It's a Mistake

To neglect caring for a cough or cold. Every time you cough you increase the trouble and soon an inflammation is started that in a short time is difficult to control. Dr. Hale's Household Cough Cure has such a magic effect upon a cough, allaying all irritation so quickly that every person in the land should always have a bottle of this wonderful medicine on hand to begin taking at once upon the first appearance of a cold. It costs only 25c and 50c a bottle at P. H. CARPENTER'S drug store. a

M. P. GRAY,

HARDWARE MERCHANT.

Had Nothing to Do With It.
We are requested by Mr. J. B. Hendrick to say that he willingly gave the city the use of his wharf free of charge for a free ferry landing, but when the city abandoned the ferry he rented the wharf to Mr. Noel Gaines for a steam ferry landing and after that time had no control of it. If any effort was made to prevent John boats from landing there he was in no way responsible, as that was Mr. Gaines' affair entirely.
Remedy, the Famous Virtuoso,
Is said to usually carry with him while on concert tours from twenty-five to sixty superb bows. He has nearly a hundred—all of them of superexcellent quality, and many of them inlaid with gold, pearl and other expensive ornaments. He seldom uses a bow more than three or four days and nights, before it is discarded and sent to Paris to be re-haired. The duty he pays on the return of these articles is no trifling sum, but the eccentricities of genius must be gratified.
At the Opera House to-night.
Wm. H. Wheeler,
A prominent contractor and builder, of Adams, N. Y., was a great smoker for years. He liked his cigar but did not like the serious throat trouble that began to come upon him in the shape of a bunch or growth. As he expressed it he was afraid he was going to have a Grand throat. At this stage he began using Dr. Hale's Household Ointment, applying it directly to the bunch inside his throat several times each day. A few weeks of this treatment entirely cured the bad throat and Mr. Wheeler states that it worked a most wonderful cure in his case and that he regards Dr. Hale's Household Ointment as the greatest medicine of the 19th century. It cures all inflammation, 25c. and 50c. boxes at P. H. CARPENTER'S drug store. a

Take It Back.

What we say on the first page about a means of transportation not being provided for the people on the South Side was written at a time when we, together with all the residents of that portion of the city, were getting to and from our homes in a sort of catch-as-catch-can manner, and, after thinking about it, feel satisfied we did some of the committee injustice. That they were making an effort to relieve the people of the South Side is evident from the fact that Mr. John E. Miles, a member of the committee, had made a contract with Mr. Seckner to have the floor of one of the sidewalks on the bridge laid at once, and it would have been completed in a few days if the work on the bridge had not been ordered suspended, and would have rendered the people independent of floods in the river.

Walked Off the Wall.

Wm. Coons, who is in the employ of Mr. Jose Aubrey, the butcher, started to cross the bridge yesterday morning about 4:30, and in walking out on the wing wall he stepped into the niche made for the floor beam of the sidewalk, falling about 35 feet into the soft mud below. He was terribly bruised up about the head, but as he was able to walk to his home on Steele street he is not fatally injured from his fall.

Read It.

Attention is called to the advertisement of Shampona in to-day's issue, prepared by the Fayette Manufacturing Co., which is favorably known to many of our readers, but to those whom it is yet an unknown quality, we would say that Shampona does not belong to the class of quack nostrums frequently offered to the public, but is a really scientific preparation for cleaning the scalp, removing dandruff and curing eczema and promoting a healthy growth of the hair, beside providing a delightful shampoo for home use.

It is prepared under the direction of the Veteran Chemist, Dr. J. P. Barnum, of Louisville, known by reputation, if not in person, by pretty nearly every man, woman and child in Kentucky as a skillful analyst and popular lecturer on chemistry, and its practical usefulness is endorsed by an array of testimonials, such as few if any preparation ever obtained. Among them we find Mrs. Henry Watterson, Mrs. W. N. Halderman, Mrs. Dr. Cheatham, Arthur Peters, Esq., and Mrs. Nellie Ewing Wright, wife of Maj. Montgomery Wright, Marshal of the U. S. Supreme Court.

CARPENTER'S drug store.

THE BRIDGE

RESTS ON THE CRACKED ABUTMENT.

THE WORK IS STOPPED.

And the Question is: What Are You Going to Do About It?

The work of hanging the bridge was completed on Monday, when the pin connecting the top and bottom chords on the east side of the bridge was driven into position. The Construction Company having received orders from the King Bridge Company to swing the bridge on the south abutment, notwithstanding the cracks in the wall, it was let down Tuesday far enough to enable the workmen to rivet the joints at the proper time. Wednesday the workmen were started at the north end putting the floor beams in position and the work was going along as rapidly as possible, getting ready for the floor.

It was evidently the intention of the bridge people to go ahead and finish up the work now, without stopping to put up a new abutment, whether one is necessary or not, and when completed ask the city and county to say whether they would accept it, with the abutment and wing walls pulling apart in several directions.

Believing that when that time arrived the company would attempt to force this faulty pierce of work upon us, the City Council, at the meeting on Tuesday evening and also at the meeting Thursday evening refused to pay the estimate upon the bridge which fell due in January, and the bridge company ordered the work stopped yesterday. It is claimed that the money should be paid, as the representative of the King people had promised that everything should be satisfactory, but as far as we are informed that promise has never been made in writing by the company, and as this same representative made other representations in regard to the bridge in the past which did not pan out, in our humble judgment the council did right in not paying a cent of the money in the hands of the city. A law suit is sure to follow and it is best to hold on to everything in sight.

It is pretty rough on the city to be without a bridge at this time of the year, but as we have done without it so far we can manage to worry along until we succeed in calling this bluff of a corporation which has violated its contract and is now seeking to avoid the consequences.

Joseph W. Dory, of Warsaw, Ill., was troubled with rheumatism and tried a number of different remedies, but says none of them seemed to do him any good; but finally he got hold of one that speedily cured him. He was much pleased with it, and felt sure that others similarly afflicted would like to know what the remedy was that cured him. He states for the benefit of the public that it is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. For sale by P. H. CARPENTER, South Side Druggist.

Running Again.

The flood in the river having subsided sufficiently to permit the ferryboat being operated with safety, it was started again yesterday afternoon and is now running all right.

The Modern Invalid

Has tastes medicinally, in keeping with others luxuries. A remedy must be pleasantly acceptable in form, purely wholesome in composition, truly beneficial in effect and entirely free from every objectionable quality. If really ill he consults a physician; if constipated he uses the gentle family laxative Syrup of Figs.

Announcement.

No apology is necessary on the score of medical propriety for thus announcing to the profession and the public, that we have made a long, careful and special study of cancerous diseases, together with all malignant and other tumors, and are able to offer the results of our extensive experience in Kentucky and surrounding countries in a system of rational and successful treatment, that we believe has never heretofore been attained, and we are able to point to thousands of successful cases—not in a boasting, but rather in a spirit of thankfulness, that we are thus able to prove so clearly our assertion; that our system does cure cancer. With a positive knowledge of this fact now so fully endorsed by thousands of sufferers, and approved by the profession, we should be wanting in humanity if we neglected any means in our power to spread the glad tidings among those afflicted with this most terrible and hopeless of diseases.

We have printed a pamphlet giving the symptoms, cause, varieties, &c., of cancers and tumors. Anyone feeling interesting can get a copy free by addressing,

GEO. A. LEWIS, Editor and Pub.

FRANKFORT, FEBRUARY 10, 1894.

His Last Run.

W. H. Cavins died in Lexington on Tuesday and the remains were taken through this city to Louisville Wednesday and interred in Cave Hill Cemetery. The deceased was for many years an engineer on the old Louisville and Lexington railroad, and was considered one of the most reliable men in the employ of the company. During the late war he was several times lionized for his bravery in carrying his charges through the danger of active warfare. He was frequently fired upon by wandering bands of guerrillas, but was always fortunate in person as well with his trains. In those troublesome times if it was known to passengers leaving this city for Louisville that Henry Cavins was at the throttle they felt sure he would carry them through safely. Failing health compelled him to retire from active service in 1882, and for nearly twelve years he had been an invalid.

He was a son of the late Ignatius T. Cavins, an old time printer, who learned the "art preservative" in Lexington at the same time with the late Col. A. G. Hodges, was for many years an employee of the old Louisville Journal and held cases on that paper when its office was at the northeast corner of Fifth and Main streets, and was there when it burned out—an occasion when there was great loss of life, both by fire and falling walls—but he succeeded in escaping. In 1857 he was employed at the old Commonwealth office in this city when the boiler of that establishment blew up and, although but ten feet away from the boiler when the explosion occurred, escaped with a slight injury, being struck on the head by a flying brick.

An Orphan.

There has been considerable complaint during the last week about the condition of the road leading from the Louisville pike around to the west end of the railroad bridge, and every one has asked why it has not been improved? The road seems to be an orphan. Only that portion of it which is between the Louisville pike and the road which comes down the hill from Mrs. Williams' is within the city limits, as it is claimed the boundary line of the city crosses the road at that point and runs along the top of the river bank to the mouth of Benson, consequently the city is not responsible for all of it. The county does not claim it because it claims that the city line runs along the west side of the road, or in the center of it, all the way to the mouth of Benson. If it is outside the city the council has no right to improve a county road, and if within the city the county has nothing to do with it. By an agreement between the county court and the city council some work was done upon it last fall, each body paying half the expense, but it was not very materially improved and the recent heavy travel over it has cut it up considerably and rendered it almost impassable. Squire J. D. Moore passed along there Thursday and seeing it in such a miserable condition, sent hands to drain the mudholes and fix it up the best they could, and now if everyone who has to ride over it does not vote for Dan for County Judge it will not be because he has not done them a great service.

Would It Get It?

Should the King Iron Bridge Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, wish a certificate from this people as to its promptness in executing its contracts, complying with its agreements in every particular, doing first-class work, and putting full weight iron into its bridges—would it get it? Well, hardly. But should it ask that we recommend it as a corporation which will grasp at every dollar it can get hold of on a contract, before it has a pound of iron on the ground, fail by six months to complete a job on contract time, put up a bridge 525,000 pounds lighter than the one it proposed to build, erect shoddy and tumble-down masonry upon which to swing the bridge, and put a community to all manner of inconvenience, at the worst time of the year, by reason of its utter failure to comply with its contract, and then ask what you are going to do about it—would it get it? Yes, you bet, and with a whoop.

Cussing Mad.

Mark Twain says, in Puddendhead Wilson's Calendar, "When angry count four; when very angry swear," and judging from the number of times we have heard the King Bridge Company, its hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, unanimously and vociferously cussed since the rise in the river set in, we are inclined to believe that this people have passed the "verv" point and are now getting boiling hot. And, furthermore, we are constrained to believe that if the pryers of this righteously angry community avail anything, the soul of the aforesaid corporation, if it has one, will stand a very poor show to pass muster in the other world.

Muscle and Vigor—A Difference.

Many muscular men succumb to fatigues borne with ease by persons far their inferiors in physical strength. Muscle does not imply vigor. In fact it is not difficult of proof that athletes do not live so long or enjoy as good health as the average individual who is vigorous—that is to say, whose digestion and sleep are untroubled, whose nerves are tranquil, and who has no organic tendency to disease. These requisites of vigor are conferred upon those inherently weak, not less than upon those debilitated through wasting diseases, by a thorough, persistent course of Hodges' Stomach Bitters, and the leading national tonic, indomest and recommended by physicians of eminence. It will not endow you with the muscle of a "orebit," but it will infuse energy into your system, and renew the active and beautiful performance of its functions. It cures and cures indigestion, dyspepsia and bilious complaints and overcomes dyspepsia, constipation, liver trouble and nervousness.

TO CALIFORNIA

The Land of Sunshine, Fruit, And Flowers.

The Midwinter Exposition, already much talked-of, bids fair to rival the great fair that has just closed at Chicago—not in size, perhaps, but certainly so in originality, in richness and in delighted visitors who will unanimously agree that the Pacific Coast is worth many times the time and money spent to visit it, in its return of delightful climate, mellow sunlight, wondrous growth of vegetation, and the heretofore unheard-of net-work of industries connected with fruit raising, and the shipping of the product.

In order to give an opportunity for everybody to visit this wonderland during the Exposition, California rates via the Queen & Crescent Route have been reduced, and every one may find the cost of such a trip within his means.

As for equipment, it is the only line by which you can travel from Cincinnati to San Francisco, absolutely without change. Tourist sleeping cars run every two weeks through from Cincinnati to San Francisco. Solid vestibuled trains twice a day from Cincinnati to New Orleans, where connection is made with through trains and Pullman sleepers daily to California points. Through car service to either New Orleans or Shreveport making direct connection for Texas, Mexico and California. From Louisville through trains make direct connection at Lexington with solid vestibuled service to New Orleans.

FRANKFORT, FEBRUARY 10, 1894.

General Comment.

"A Calendar of Great Americans" is the title of article in the February Forum which has attracted much attention and discussion amongst those who have read it. It is by Prof. Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton College, a man whose knowledge of our history and of our great men is consummate and exhaustive. The peculiarity of the article, and the part of it which has attracted so much attention, is the author's statement, which he bears out by a logical and convincing argument, that not all the great men who lived in, and directed the destinies of, these United States, were great Americans. The opening paragraph gives the key to his argument. He says: "Before a calendar of great Americans can be made out, a valid canon of Americanism must be established. * * * The great Englishmen bred in America, like Hamilton and Madison; the great provincials, like John Adams and Calhoun; the authors of such thought as might have been native to any clime, like Asa Gray and Emerson; the men of mixed blood, like Jefferson and Benton, must be excluded from our present list. We must pick out men who have created or exemplified a distinctly American standard and type of greatness."

It is impossible to do the article justice in this limited space, and I shall content myself with giving herein the names of those whom Professor Wilson considers worthy of a place in the list as described. Lincoln, he says, was "the supreme American of our history," from the fact that he, more than any other one man, comprehended and sympathized with the diverse elements of our national character. Jackson, although all his character was western, was yet distinctly American in type. Henry Clay was "an American of the most authentic pattern," whose character was a such mixture of east and west that "he seems like two men." John Marshall, Webster and Washington all had the distinguishing traits of Americanism. "One of the first to exhibit this American spirit with an unmistakable touch of greatness and distinction was Benjamin Franklin." Grant and Lee, the two leaders of the sections in our civil war, are alike considered worthy of a place on the list, which concludes with Patrick Henry and Sam Houston as statesmen and Curtis and Lowell as men of literature. Then follows the peroration which I shall give in full.

"There need be no fear that we shall be obliged to stop with Lowell in literature or with any of the men who have been named in the field of achievement. We shall not in the future have to take one type of Americanism at a time. The frontier has gone; it has reached the Pacific. The country grows rapidly homogenous. With the same pace it grows various and multifarious in all its life. The man of the simple or local type cannot any longer deal in the great manner with any national problem. The great men of our future must be of the composite type of greatness; sound-hearted, hopeful, confident of the validity of liberty, tenacious of the deeper principles of American institutions, but with the old rashness schooled and sobered and instinct tempered by instruction. They must be wise with an adult, not with an adolescent wisdom. Some day we shall be of one mind, our ideals fixed, our purposes harmonized, our nationality complete and consentaneous; then will come our great literature and our greatest men."

It is hardly probable that any of our historical writers will agree with Professor Wilson in the whole; some may object to his classification of Hamilton, Jefferson and others outside of the list of the distinctively American great; others may object to some of his examples of each form of Americanism; but there can be no doubt that the article will have much influence in shaping the standard of American greatness. In his peroration especially he shows a thorough grasp of the entire subject, and all who read his argument (and it should be in the hands of every patriotic American) will obtain from it a truer conception of the character of the country and of its men of destiny.

The two branches of the Kentucky Legislature, or the Democratic members thereof, seem to be divided against each other. The House recently, on motion of Mr. Beckner, of Clark, adopted a resolution calling on Senators Blackburn and Lindsay to oppose the confirmation of the nomination for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, of any man who could not establish his adherence to the organization, as well as to the principles, of the Democratic party; or in plain English, to vote against the confirmation of Mr. Peckham. This did not meet the views of the Senate, and although that body took no official action, a majority of its Democratic members telegraphed Lindsay and Blackburn to use their own judgment in the matter, which it is more than probable our two Senators would have done in any event. The action of the House, however, seems to be entirely un-called for, as the members of that body can by no means be as thoroughly acquainted with such matters as the two Senators, who are on the scene, and whose business it is to investigate the character and qualifications of the nominees. On questions of local importance the Legislature has a perfect right to instruct the Senators elected by it; but on National questions, especially nominations from other States, its interference is unwarranted and should be frowned upon by public sentiment.

THE RECLUSE.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contains Mercury.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Sold by Druggists, price 75¢ per bottle.

Pea Ridge.

Mr. Charlie Sanford and family have moved from Frankfort to the farm of Mr. Will Pierce's on the Devil Hollow pike.

The condition of the Boulevard road is simply horrible. A boundless ocean of unfathomed slush with a big land slide that is very dangerous to travelers. In view of the large number of unemployed men, now would be a good time for the authorities to fix it cheap.

The Ridge is billed with the names of the People's Party candidates for county offices. Pea Ridge captured two, John Dennis for Sheriff and James Whitehouse for Coroner.

Pea Ridge string band is open for an engagement. Banjo, Polk Tracy; first violin and leader, Walter Tracy; second violin, Ben Tracy; guitar, Elliot Tracy. A delightful serenade was given our people a few nights ago in which the music was of such a character that one unmusical genius brought out a big cake in order to stop them.

A pleasant social took place at Mr. John Pierce's residence Monday night at which Misses M. Miller, Lucy and Mildred Dalton, of Frankfort, and Miss Lillie Suttles, of Benson, attended.

All candidates of all political parties for county offices seem to have combined to ignore the Ridge. We have never received a visit, yet those who wish to speak can get the schoolhouse and a good audience to believe anything.

There are some strange people in this world, for instance, a large number of people approve of Judge Cantrell's decision ordering the Gas House precinct ballot box opened and ballots counted and yet disapprove of the decision the box gave when counted. This is unreasonable. All consular reports are revised by chiefs of department. All congressmen revise their speeches between delivery and publication in "Record," the Holy Scriptures were revised, and yet some people find fault with the return from Craw simply because it is known to be a revised version.

Mr. Ed. Mitchell, of Middletown, has been visiting relatives and friends here, staying at Mr. Joe Tracy's.

Mr. Bud Sanford, of Cedar Run, and Mr. Will Sanford, of Louisville, who have been visiting here, have returned home.

Mr. Will Crutcher, who has been very sick, is improving.

Invitations were out early in the week for a big wood chopping last Wednesday, concluding with a grand dance at night at the residence of Mr. Riddle.

While some complain of hardships, lack of employment, &c., times seem to be about the same here as during 1893. Several houses have been built by Messrs. Waggoner, Dennis, Pierce and Bryant on the Devil Hollow pike, while Mr. Collins is laying the foundation for one.

Mr. Polk Tracy and Mr. Ed. Mitchell went to Middletown last Wednesday.

Mr. Jim Tracy, who has been very sick, is much better.

A Kentucky humorist once said: "Frankfort lives on driftwood and the Legislature." This being the case hard times cannot effect us for the river is up, drift is plentiful and the Legislature is in session, spreading a feast of eloquence daily.

Mr. Pete Quinn and family, of Stoney Creek, are living at Mr. Joe Tracy's until a farm that Mr. Quinn has rented from Mr. Will Pierce is vacated.

What an interesting volume "Recollections of Frankfort" would make. A case in point:

"You see I got a job at Rodman's mill and I boarded right across the street from the tunnel. One dinner time, after we had quite a run of Walnut logs, some fellow with a plug hat and a big valise came where I was sitting and pointing to the walnut sawdust, said: 'Mister, can I have some of that sawdust?'"

"As much as you want," said I.

So he filled his valise and handkerchief and went off.

When I got home that night the landlady met me at the door and said, "I've moved your room," said she. "What for?" said I. And then she told me that three famous doctors had come from New York or some place, with a lot of very powerful medicine which they were going to use on the sick of Frankfort, and that the medicine was very powerful, having cured all the diseases in the doctors' own State, so they were obliged to travel about to hunt up cases of sickness. "What kind of medicine is it, and what is it good for?" said I.

"Why, it cures every mortal thing," said she. "There isn't any disease it won't cure, and it comes from away off over the sea, where it is gathered by the Kaffirs and Hottentots and carried on the backs of camels across the Red Sea, and it's the most wonderful remedy ever invented. But you'll see the doctors and hear what they say, for they are going to sell a lot to night in front of the Statehouse. I've bought two bottles myself, and they have sold some to all the boarders, for it cures like magic and goes like wildfire."

Going across the porch to the kitchen, I noticed a stranger filling up several dozen vials from an old copper pot; then he went to the kitchen and filled up the copper pot from the boiler on the stove and returned to his vials. Just then the landlady came in and I asked her: "What is that in the boiler?"

"That's the medicine I told you about," said she, as she stirred it up with a stick. The drugs on the stick seemed familiar to me, so, looking closer, I saw that it was walnut sawdust. I said nothing to her about what I discovered, but went up to my room, where I found two men sitting at the table playing euchre. On the table was an open valise and a handkerchief nearly full of sawdust. As soon as they saw me one of them picked up a vial which contained some dark looking liquid, handed it to me, told me it was a wonderful medicine, cured everything, only 50 cents a bottle, and then he dosed me with the camel-Kaffir-Hottentot tale, which I had heard before.

"You say that Hottentots got this medicine on the shore of the Red sea? What do you mean by that?" said I. "Are you not the same fellow who asked me for some sawdust at noon to-day? I think I know walnut sawdust when I see it; there's a boiler full of it down stairs."

They both laughed, begged me not to give the thing away, and made various other pleas, until I consented to say nothing of the matter. At night there was an immense crowd at the State House gate listening to the three great doctors from New York. When I got there, one of them who was called Professor by the other two doctors, was just concluding his speech in favor of the Great Remedy. They sold the bottles like wildfire, the people tumbled over each other to get them.

Every night it was just the same, crowds came to hear the doctors' music and buy their great remedy. They stayed about two weeks and I found them very agreeable company. I liked them though I despised their deceitful business.

Sometimes when I was tempted to expose the matter, I was confronted by the fact that the medicine did work most marvelous cures. Men I worked with bought it and it cured their families. It cured some of my fellow-boarders, and my landlady declared that she had secured great benefits from its use. So I thought it best to say nothing, for if they could cure a dozen different diseases in all kinds of people with sawdust, let them go ahead.

One day soon after the doctors had gone, I heard Bill — telling some of the men at the mill all about the wonderful medicine, what it had done for him, &c., winding up with "I don't see why the Government don't send some ships over there and load them up with the medicine. Send soldiers enough to conquer the country, if necessary, make the Kaffirs dig all along the shores of the Red Sea and send us enough medicine to cure all the diseases in the world."

"You need not take all that trouble. You can get all you want of that medicine for nothing at Rodman's Mill, on the shore of the Kentucky river," said I.

"What do you mean?" said he. I then told them all I knew, and offered to take them to my boarding house and show them the sawdust that, after being stewed, was dumped in the back yard. I don't think that I convinced them, but whenever I read about some great cure all I feel convinced myself that it is something like the Kaffir-camel Red sea remedy, made from sawdust from Rodman's mill.

Admitted the Facts.

Newspaper editors have to be very careful in opening their columns for statements. But aware that the Dr. Miles Medical Co. are responsible, we make room for the following testimonial from R. McDougall, Auburn, Ind., who for two years noticed a stoppage or skipping of the pulse, his left side got so tender he could not lie on it, his heart fluttered, he was alarmed, went to different doctors, found no relief but one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure cured him. The elegant book, "New and Startling Facts," free at J. W. Gayle's. It tells all about heart and nervous diseases and many wonderful cures.

An Open Letter to My Contemporaries.

FRANKFORT, Ky.,
February 8, 1894.
GENTLEMEN—I desire to enter into a written contract with each and all of you, to the effect that none of us shall use, directly or indirectly, either money or whisky in our present race for Jailor of Franklin county. I propose to make the race upon high principles and upon my own personal merits, and I hope you gentlemen will agree with me in this proposition and abide the result as I shall. I shall stand by what I say here if I go down in defeat thereby, and I shall bow in submission to the verdict of the people at the polls. I have already seen the evils of whisky in the race. Boys under 20 drunk and down in the gutter through candidate's whisky (not mine, you may be sure). Now these are sad sights for the good mothers of our county, and I shall set my face against it and call upon you to do likewise.

Mr. Albert Favotite, of Arkansas City, Kan., wishes to give our readers the benefit of his experience with colds. He says: "I contracted a cold early last spring that settled on my lungs and had hardly recovered from it when I caught another that hung on all summer and left me with a hacking cough which I thought I never would get rid of. I had used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy some fourteen years ago with much success and concluded to try it again. When I had got through with one bottle my cough had left me, and I have not suffered with a cough or cold since. I have recommended it to others, and all speak well of it." 50 cent bottles for sale by P. H. CARPENTER, South Side Druggist.
